"The only narcotic used by the Siriono is tobacco (éro), which is smoked in clay pipes, whose manufacture has already been discussed. Both the men and the women smoke, although it is always the latter who make the pipes (keákwa) and prepare the tobacco. Children do not smoke until after they have reached the age of puberty."

"After the rites of puberty have been completed, a girl is no longer regarded as yukwáki (a girl), but is free to have intercourse with her potential husbands and to be married to one of them. In this connection it is interesting to note that there were a number of girls at Tibaera already married or having intercourse who had not yet menstruated. Ngidá (Bow), a boy, for example, was married to Yikína (Owl-monkey) while I was living at Tibaera. She was about 10 years of age and showed no signs of maturity at this time. [81] Some 2 years later I made a plane flight to Lago Yuachi on which some Siriono were camped, among them Ngidá and Yikína. The latter was just beginning to show signs of adolescence after more than 2 years of marriage. In another instance, Kimbai-ñéti (Little-man), a mature man whose wife had died, married Edabóbo (Armpit), a girl who had not yet reached adolescence. They lived together for some months while I was at Tibaera."
